Hanging Gun Bags

Bags vs. Boxes:

Revolutionize Your Firearm Storage

What is the comparison between our Hanging Gun Bags and the old style cardboard evidence box? The first issue is always cost, with the cardboard box being about 1/2 the initial cost of a hanging gun bag. This is deceptive because boxes are a one time use item. The hanging gun bags can be washed to destroy any trace DNA evidence and reused many times over. The second issue is construction; fabric vs. cardboard. While cardboard has some good features, it's light and strong for it's weight, it doesn't allow air circulation and oil and solvents will destroy it. The fabric design of the hanging gun bag does allow for air circulation. Oil and solvents will not degrade its structure. And lastly the question of hanging vs. stacking? Whether you decided to use a high density railing system or a wall-mounted rack, the ease of inventory is beyond comparison. Access to any of your evidence firearms is quick and easy with this system. It's just like choosing a shirt from your closet at home. Cardboard boxes are cumbersome and have to be stacked on shelves. When you stack too many on a shelf, the box structure breaks down and flattens. Every department strives for a clean, professional and organized evidence room, and the hanging gun bag system from Pacific Concepts can help you achieve that goal.

- Our bags can be sanitized and used many times.
- Quick access due to identification on each bag.
- Oils and solvents will not degrade the structure.
- No glue used in the fabrication of our bags
- Inventory is organized and effective
